A few words for prospective employers on my former employee, Rebecca Norton.

Rebecca is one of the finest digital media professionals I've had the pleasure of working with in the decade I've spent in this category. Her creative thinking, passion for technical excellence, superb attention to detail, hard work and organizational skills make her a strong asset for any business with a high priority on driving results from digital

On tasks assigned to her, Rebecca regularly exceeded my expectations. Results driven by her contributions consistently outperformed norms. She even succeeded in tasks that fell outside of her skill set, but were critical for the business to accomplish.

It was a tough day when Rebecca left my team, but our loss is a terrific opportunity for another ambitious company in the digital media space.

Sincerely,
Mario Sgambelluri, Associate Publisher

I would like to take the opportunity to offer a formal recommendation for Rebecca Adams. As a web designer at iMedia Communications and member of the creative department, I spent over a year working closely with Rebecca and feel I have grown as a designer by working with her.

Rebecca proved consistently that she is an incredibly talented front-end web developer and designer. She took on difficult challenges (transitioning our team to grid based design) and eagerly tackled projects outside the scope of her job requirements, often staying late to make sure each project met her personal standards.

Her attention to detail and up-to-date knowledge of trends and industry news make her an invaluable member of the team. She is a terrific teacher and co-worker and I highly recommend her to anyone seeking a talented and driven web designer.
